L&T Technology Services Completes CWIP Certification Program for Widevine DRM solutions

Google's Widevine DRM helps Service Providers offer secure next-generation video experiences, empowering PayTV across a host of devices with free-to-use DRM solutions.

BENGALURU, SEPTEMBER 16, 2019: L&T Technology Services Limited (NSE: LTTS), a leading global pure-play engineering services company, announced it has been trained and certified by Widevine as part of the Certified Widevine Implementation Partner [CWIP] program for OTT delivery of secure content to devices for streaming or download.

The services will be available for Android and other consumer device platforms facilitating seamless content to consumer delivery. The products and services offered will cater to the next generation requirements from end-customers and augment their experience through top-quality functionality.

With over 15 years of product engineering services in video broadcast and end to end digital video solutions, LTTS helps carry out multiple integrations such as analytics, digital rights management (DRM) and system integration services for service provider deployments.

“Google is delighted to have L&T Technology Services as a Certified Widevine Implementation Partner which will enable them to deploy, for their customers, a studio-approved DRM that supports all of the popular consumer playback platforms and business models,” said Brian Baker, Director, Product Management.

John Pushparaj, EVP and Business Head of Media & Entertainment at L&T Technology Services said, “Android based devices and OTT solutions have extremely high potential in enhancing customer experience for both viewers as well as operators. We look forward to a fruitful collaboration with Widevine leveraging L&T Technology Services’ already established deep domain experience in the fast-growing internet enabled device landscape to develop a premium range of content to consumer devices that offer compelling user experiences.”
